

From Our Founder

Transforming your entire home at once is both the most ambitious and most rewarding renovation project you can undertake. As I've guided countless homeowners through this journey, one question consistently emerges first: "What should I budget for a whole-home transformation?"

Unlike point-purchases with clear price tags, whole-home remodeling involves countless interconnected decisions. This complexity is precisely why we've created this straightforward guide based on a 2500-4000 sq ft home with 4 bedrooms and 3 baths. The investment ranges below include everything—design, labor, craftsmanship, materials, and fixtures—categorized by finish quality from Basic to Upper tier. Remember that these figures serve as orientation points rather than exact quotes for your unique situation.

What truly sets Caine and Company apart is our holistic approach to complete home reinvention. We coordinate every element, from structural changes to finishing touches, creating a cohesive result that feels both new and immediately like home. Ready to explore possibilities? Let's schedule a conversation about breathing new life into your entire living space.
